NEW LENOX MAN GIVEN 90-DAY PRISON TERM FOR MOLESTING 8-YEAR OLD GIRL

ABOUT THIS — AND — ABOUT THAT

By OLIVER GEDEIST

APOLOGY TO THE WASTEBASKET—Just now I threw a letter into the wastebasket. It was from a Chicago organization. The writer wanted us to advertise—free, of course—a meeting at which Mr. Henry Wallace is scheduled to speak. "Everybody," the writer lied, "is interested in hearing Mr. Wallace." Then it approves Mr. Wallace's attacking, in other countries, his own country's nonpartisan foreign policy—meaning, of course, Uncle Sam's unwillingness to bow the knee to Stalin and his brute-force ideals. But the rubbish is gone, exactly where the whole kaboodle of Russia-loving agitators should go. Though it's hard on the wastebasket.

FROM INDIA—Mrs. Chandra Singh is not widely known. You may never hear of her again. She is from India. And going back. Not that she doesn't like it here. But there are needy in India. Mrs. (later to be Dr.—an M. D., that is) Singh is studying medicine in Chicago, then, when finished, back to India. But not into a great city where income would be substantial. She is going out to the smaller places, where she can help the great masses of people—by treatment, yes—but, Mrs. Singh said, our people need PREVENTIVE medicine; to be taught HOW TO STAY WELL.

NOT EASY—It's not easy for Mrs. Singh—nor for Mr. Singh and their five-year-old daughter. Mr. Singh works while Mrs. Singh studies, does clinic work; it's not easy going. But the Singh's are happy about it—they are going back to help to make the sunshine brighter for unlimited numbers of people in India.

BACK IN THE LIGHT—A college professor waited for daylight one morning in 1919. Then he discovered his daylight was finished. He woke up blind. Now he sees—and what a different world, he says. But he did not lose time. He learned Braille. He kept up his work. Now, with marvelous medical science restoring his sight, he has nothing to catch up on except material beauty which had been shut away for 28 years.

A buffet luncheon and reception was held for the immediate families in the 18th Century Woman's club room in Oak Park. Decorations were in blue and white. The tables were set for 200 guests. A six-tier wedding cake adorned the bridal table. The gifts were profuse and beautiful.

FRONT PAGE—Headline readers of newspapers often miss much that is interesting. All good things cannot get onto the front page. Advertisements, for example. They're nearly all on the inside. And they're paid for, too. And features along with news and advertisements—there's a wealth of interest on the inside. Don't stick to first-page headlines.

LET'S WORRY—Let's get out our handkerchiefs and begin to worry and cry. Everything's going to pot, so some say. Great issues face us—something like those that faced us 50 years ago, and a year ago and in-between—remember them? Of course not. Many of the GREAT ISSUES of the political world are worth exactly as much as those others. Put away your crying towel—there's nothing to worry about.

ABOUT HEADLINES—The other day a big newspaper had a headline declaring that the President had "barrel" congressmen from access to files taken by Mr. Roosevelt's family to Hyde Park. Reading the story, it was found that Mr. Truman merely told the congressmen that he could not ask for delivery of the papers to congressmen—he had no more authority than they, which was none. Read the story. Do not depend upon a headline.

Justice of the Peace Anthony Mackay Tuesday sentenced Leroy Johnson, 50, of New Lenox, to a three months, prison term in Vandalia following conviction on a charge of molesting an eight-year-old New Lenox girl.

In addition to the prison term, Judge Mackay ordered that upon completion of the prison term, the man shall leave Will county.

The offense occurred last Sunday while the little girl was playing near her home. According to her statement to her parents, the man approached her and asked her if she would like to go for a ride in his car. Receiving a negative reply, Johnson is alleged to have asked if she liked horses; and then, receiving an affirmative reply, invited her to get into the car and go a short way where she could have a horseback ride.

The little girl refused, saying she had to go home because rain had started to fall, whereupon the man offered to take her home. Upon being informed that "I live right here" by the child, Johnson, it was said, departed.

Sheriff's officers responded to a call from the child's father and the officers picked up the man from the description of the car and man furnished by the child.

Book Club Library Listings Are Given

Beginning today, The News-Bulletin will, from time to time, list Mokena Book Club books which are available, including fiction and non-fiction. Following is the first installment:

"Animal Farm" by George Orwell. "And Now Tomorrow" by Rachel Field. Character study of Emily Blair, whose family owned the Blair Mills in a New England town. After a severe illness, Emily was left absolutely deaf. Her long struggle to regain her health was successful in the end, but her love affair was not. It was the doctor who restored her hearing who taught Emily the philosophy of "and now tomorrow."

"Apartment in Athens" by Glenway Wescott—A novel based on the occupation of Greece by the Nazis. In it a bullying Nazi officer, quartered on a meek middle class Greek family, encompasses the destruction of the husband. Then the stricken wife plans that her young children shall join the underground movement.

"The Apostle" by Sholem Asch—A novel based on the life of St. Paul, by the author of "The Nazarene." It is primarily a work of exception, an account of the growth of early Christian doctrine and the spread of Christianity, and an interpretation of Christianity as the culminating, finest step of Jewish religious development.

"Arch of Triumph," by Erich Remarque.

"Ballad and the Source" by Rosamond Lehmann—The central character of this story is an amazingly complex and mysterious woman, Sybil Jardine. The reader learns of her through the young mind of Rebecca, the narrator. From a number of sources she gathers the exciting fragments of evidence which are the substance of this subtle and compelling story.

"Behold Your King" by Florence M. Bauer.

Officers of the local club are John and James Smith and Wayne Triem, all of New Lenox.

Frankfort Assesses Fine On Smart Youth

Reckless driving in Frankfort cost a Manteno youth, William T. Shonkweller, $13 in Police Magistrate J. C. Knight's court last Saturday. The fine was paid without appearance.

The violation occurred late in the evening recently, after skating hour, officials stated.

Village President George Sangmeister made the arrest, after, according to the statement, observing an automobile being driven at high speed down the street, turning with screaming brakes, and racing up the street again, to the evident admiration of a group of misguided youths who had come to Frankfort for the skating.

Mr. Sangmeister called to the youth to stop, but at his command, he reported, the lights were turned off and the car dashed away, but not before the official secured the license number, which was traced, resulting in an arrest ticket being issued and the money being sent to the court.

Reckless driving, along with other annoyances by disorderly groups, must stop, Mr. Sangmeister declares, or it is going to result in arrests and legal punishment.

Allison - Jungles

The Lockport Congregational church was the scene of a beautiful candle-light ceremony Saturday evening, May 3, when Miss Betty Allison of Lockport, became the bride of Merlin Jungles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jungles of Homer township. The Rev. Milton Heitzman officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Miss Allison wore a bridal gown of white satin with long train and full length veil and carried an arm bouquet of spring flowers. She was attended by Miss Helen Bloy as maid-of-honor and Mrs. Robert Allison and Mrs. Ruessel Lindstrom as bridesmaids; little Caroline Allison was the flower girl.

Charles Jungles served his brother as best man with Leonard Boyer and Alvin Welter acting as groomsmen.

The ushers were Robert Allison and Howard Jungles.

The groom's sisters, Mrs. Leonard Bertelsen and Mrs. Albert Thomas, lighter the candles.

The women's gowns made a rainbow of pastel colors—blue, peach, green, yellow and pink.

Preceding and following the ceremony appropriate music was played by Mrs. Walter Nelson, "I Love You Truly" and "Because" were sung by Miss Shirley Jungles.

Little Fred Brokenhearted

Out on Wolf road, between 2d and 3d streets, there is a heart-broken tot—five-year-old Fred Kieslar. He's heart-broken because he does not have a tricycle. He did have one. But one of those craven hearts took it away—when no one was looking, of course. Even at that, maybe the thief still has a bit of conscience. If so, it is hoped he will return the tricycle to the little fellow, who lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Kiesler.

Air Marking Aids Troubled Plane Pilot

Recently bad weather caught a pilot near Tinley Park, according to Edward Prosper, and were enabled to land because of Tinley Park water tower.

The pilot was lavish in his praise of Tinley Park for "air marking" the town so pilots in difficulty can find their way to a landing at an airport when trouble overtakes them. Mr. Prosper reports a number of such incidents have occurred.

Mokena's Cavett drug store has been bought by H. B. Boleman of Chicago, who took over the drug store effective Saturday night May 3.

The drug store in Mokena has been under the supervision of Joe Dunn, who expects to enter business for himself at an early date. He still occupies the apartment connected with the store, while awaiting the selection of location as residence and also the maturing of plans for opening a drug store around Chicago.

In a statement issued by Alan S. Cavett of Tinley Park, owner of the Mokena store as well as of Cavett's pharmacy in Tinley Park, the business was sold because of the increasing demands upon Mr. Cavett's time in connection with his Tinley Park store.

"The Mokena store has wonderful possibilities under the new owner, H. B. Boleman," Mr. Cavett said, adding that "Mr. Boleman is long-experienced and a highly capable pharmacist and business man."

Mr. Boleman, who has been engaged in business in Chicago for 15 years, operating a prescription store, told The Semmler Papers that he looks forward to a happy experience in Mokena. Until Mr. Dunn has found other quarters, the family of the new owner will continue to live in Chicago. When building conditions are more propitious he expects to build a home in Mokena.

Mr. Boleman is a graduate of the Valparaiso college of pharmacy in Valparaiso, Ind. He is a member of the national pharmacists' organization, the A. P. H. A.

The Boleman family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Boleman and their three daughters—ages 13, 9, and 8 years.

Miss Dorothy Cramer, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Cramer of Melrose Park, and Vinson W. Kreimeier, formerly of Joliet, son of Roland Kreimeier of Wilmington, Del., were united in marriage at a double ring ceremony at 6 o'clock at St. John's Evangelical and Reformed Church at Melrose Park. "I Love Thee" and "Lord's Prayer" were sung by a close friend of the bride, The bride's father, the Rev. W. J. Cramer, officiated, the Rev. Mr. Beulekamp of Evanston and the Rev. Mr. Goebel of Chicago assisting. The bride was attended by her cousin, Mrs. Robert Karcor of Chicago, Mrs. Edward Bennett of Orland Park, cousin of the groom and Miss Ethel Dallenoe, close friend of the bride, of Melrose Park. The groom was attended by his cousin, Arthur Beagley of Blue Island, the bride's cousin, Richard Hiemann from Indianapolis, Ind., and Mr. Edward Bennett of Orland Park.

The bridal party were attired in beautiful pale blue formal of satin overdraped of sheer chiffon, with long sleeves and wore head wreaths of rose buds and large bouquets of red roses. The groom's aunt, Mrs. Arthur Beagley of Orland Park, wore a dusty rose crepe dress, black and white accessories. Her corsage was white carnations and red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Kreimeier left by auto for Florida. The bride chose a gray suit and accessories of black for traveling.

Mokena Trustees Set Law Enforcement Program

Mokena Village President Everett Cooper Tuesday night announced village trustee committee appointments for the ensuing year.

Trustees took action on a number of things involving operation of the village for the future and for keeping the village clean and maintaining law and order.

The health factor developed when it was announced that state inspectors are scheduled to arrive in Mokena at an early date to make a thorough inspection of all places selling food and drinks. This inspection, it was reported, will include food stores, soda fountains, taverns, and eating places. It is expected that frequent repeat inspections will be made by state inspectors.

Trustees and village president all emphasized another phase of village government directly of interest to every citizen of the community: police activity.

Acting upon complaints of careless parking, double parking, parking too close to fire hydrants, and even on the sidewalks, and parking trucks across the street, authorities declared that these practices must be stopped. "No favors" was the attitude of the authorities, who announced that tickets already prepared, will be issued to all violators.

Speeding and reckless driving will receive the closest attention of police and judicial authorities, it was announced.

Another phase of the traffic rules concerns parking on streets all night. "This has become a sort of popular pastime," one official commented, but added, "The practice, indulged in by many of us, is definitely a hazard in case of fire. It is necessary that the practice be stopped."

There is an alternative, of course, to obeying the village laws—see our judge. And the tempo of the trustees' attitude is that the law must be enforced for the benefit of all the people of Mokena.

From now on, under a street and alleys resolution adopted by the board, it will be unlawful to dump garbage or rubbish, limbs of trees, on property, and the resolution prohibits the use of garbage burners—barrels in which some persons burn their garbage.

It was emphasized that placing of garbage in the open in any fashion attracts dogs, and this, it was said, must be stopped. To be sure that compliance is made with the law, a committee of the board will make a thorough inspection of the village in about two weeks, and summonses will be issued against violators. It was also suggested that complaints concerning dogs be made to the Will county health department.

Another action of the board was the urging the community to abstain from the use of roll roofing and simulated brick coverings for buildings. Only fireproof materials may be used, and citizens were reminded that property values may depend upon the kind of materials used on buildings.

Village officials salaries were set by the board for the ensuing year, these being as follows: Trustees, $5 per meeting; village president, $7.50 per meeting; village clerk, $150 a year; village treasurer, $150 a year, but to be effective only beginning with July 1. The board set $20 monthly remuneration for water works maintenance man.

GREEN ON WAY OUT

WASHINGTON.—Sparks are beginning to fly in the AFL executive council over who will succeed Pres. William Green when Green finally is retired to the rocking chair at the AFL national convention next October in San Francisco.

George Meany, AFL secretary-treasurer, and "Big Bill" Hutcheson, boss of the powerful Carpenters' union, are the leading aspirants at this stage and both have been busy as bird-dogs behind the scenes garnering support. It looks like a bitter battle.

Normally Hutcheson would have the edge on Meany, who is backed by the Bricklayers' union, chiefly because of Hutcheson's kinship with John L. Lewis. The combination of two such large unions as the United Mine Workers and the Carpenters could just about clinch the election of any chosen candidate.

However, the inside betting is that Lewis will try to steamroller the convention for himself at the last minute. The craggy-browed Miners' boss has said nothing and is playing close to the vest. But friends report that he has a burning ambition to step into Green's shoes and turn the United Mine Workers' presidency over to Tom Kennedy, UMW secretary-treasurer.

Although not bed-ridden, the aged Green has been in poor health for some time. Tipoff on his physical condition was his recent testimony before the house un-Americanism committee.

RADICAL LITERATURE

Believe it or not, but some state department officials consider the Declaration of Independence a radical piece of literature. This developed recently during the state department's program to sell the rest of the world on democracy in the U. S. A. This propaganda is long-needed and long-delayed, but its effectiveness depends on how it is carried out.

State department officials recently were preparing a package of literature for Nepal, India, including copies of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence. Suddenly one official objected.

"I'm afraid the Declaration of Independence is a little too radical for people over there," said Chester Chartrand, in charge of cultural relations for southeast Asia. "We'll send the Constitution, but not the Declaration of Independence."

So the cherished document by which this nation declared its freedom was left at home.

HENRY WALLACE OPINES

Some interesting history is wrapped up in the Logan act, which congressmen now want invoked to prevent Henry Wallace from denouncing aid to Greece and Turkey.

Dr. George Logan, for whom the act was named, was a Pennsylvania Quaker and scientific farmer (shades of Henry Wallace!) who went to Paris in 1798 to work against war between France and the United States.

The French revolution at that time was as earth-shaking as the Russian revolution today, and Washington was seething with rumors that Bonaparte's fleet was about to attack the Atlantic coast; also that France was fomenting a revolt among African slaves in the United States.

Although Logan's mission to France was self-appointed, he carried letters of introduction from Thomas Jefferson and others who opposed war between France and the U. S. In Paris, Logan saw Talleyrand, made several talks and was well received by the French press.

At home he was denounced for meddling in foreign affairs. The conservative Federalists were especially critical. Both George Washington and Pres. John Quincy Adams were cool when Logan returned, and Secretary of State Pickens asked congress to vote legislation barring unauthorized meddling in foreign affairs. Although the act was passed, Logan was not prosecuted.

Technically, Secretary Pickens himself violated the law after he left the cabinet, and although the law has been on the statute books 150 years, no one has ever been prosecuted.

AUTO WORM TURNS

A year ago the auto industry was predicting the failure of Henry Kaiser's daring automobile venture.

However, Kaiser, who has long been pumping fresh blood into American industry, has slowly been licking the crises. And recently he had an amazing experience.

The heads of three other auto companies—Studebaker, Nash and Packard—came to Kaiser, asked him to help in cracking some of their own bottlenecks the way Kaiser had beaten his. So Kaiser, the man whose failure was predicted by his competitors, now is loaning some of his key men to help those competitors with their own headaches.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Seniority Rights

The recent decision of the U. S. Supreme court, which determined that the seniority rights of veterans who return to their old jobs end after one year, will affect thousands of veterans who have claimed this right under the selective service act.

The court ruled that after a year the seniority rights of a veteran are no greater than those of any fellow worker with identical seniority. According to the court, however, a veteran does have these advantages over a non-veteran during his first year at his old job: His seniority cannot be reduced by collective bargaining or by any change in the employer's policy. His insurance, health and similar benefits cannot be cut. He cannot be fired, but he can be laid off temporarily if other workers with similar seniority are laid off. The case was taken to the high court from Cincinnati by a veteran when eight years were lopped off his seniority in a collective bargaining contract signed more than a year after he went back to work for his pre-war employer.

Questions and Answers

Q. Can you tell me what becomes of profits received from canteens operated by Veterans' administration at all VA hospitals and nursing homes?—A. J. H., Sikeston, Mo.

A. Veterans' administration says there are supposed to be no profits. Under an act passed by the 79th congress an appropriation of five million dollars was set up as a revolving fund for purchase and operation of these canteens from private concessions. VA has taken over 85 of them and soon will take over the rest. They do not operate at a profit, but also cannot operate at a loss. The five million dollars is kept as a revolving fund and all receipts are returned to the fund. At the end of the fiscal year all money over and above the five million is returned to the treasury's miscellaneous receipts fund. It is possible that the amount of the revolving fund may be reduced after all canteens are purchased but that is a matter to be determined by congress.

Q. My husband is a veteran taking on-the-job training. Is it compulsory that he join the union? He has been told if he doesn't pay initiation fees for the union that he will be fired from his present job. Does the contract which is signed by him and his employer concerning his on-the-job training have any bearing as to whether he would be fired or not?—Mrs. B. C., Lubbock, Tex.

A. VA says that while it may not be compulsory, when a veteran elects to take training at a given shop or plant he more or less accepts the conditions of employment there. For instance, if the management has a closed shop or has a contract with the union for a union shop, the veteran should know and accept these conditions when he goes to work there. In some cases unions waive initiation and union dues for veterans. Relative to the contract as between the employer and the veteran, these differ in various sections of the country and depend entirely upon conditions under which management of the shop has contracted with workers. If the veteran has any questions as to validity of his rights, he should consult the regional VA office which has jurisdiction over the particular plant where he is working and taking his training.

Q. My husband secured a G.I. loan to acquire our home. Since his discharge from the army and our return to this territory he has suffered much from asthma. My question is, if he were to sell the property, which was secured by a G.I. loan, would he be permitted to obtain a second G.I. loan on a home in a locality where he would not suffer from asthma?—D. M. B., Tuscarawas, Ohio.

A. The maximum guaranty permitted under a G.I. home loan is $4,000. If your husband used this maximum in obtaining your present home, then he would not be eligible for a second G.I. loan. If, however, he did not use up his maximum, say he only used $2,000 he would be permitted to make application for a second G.I. loan for the balance of $2,000.

Q. Is it true that there is a prescribed uniform which nurses in Veterans' administration hospitals must wear? I am a veteran of the army nurse corps and was interested in entering a VA hospital. Can you tell me about this?—Miss J. L., Greenville, Ohio.

A. Veterans' administration says that nurses in veterans' hospitals may wear white uniforms of their own choice or they may wear the caps, uniforms and capes of the schools in which they received their training.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Introductions

DO YOU get tongue-tied and flustered when you have to make introductions? It's easy to avoid embarrassment when you know the rules.

In introducing a man and a woman, speak the woman's name first unless the man is very old or very distinguished. If the people are both the same sex, present the younger to the older. As "Mother, this is Janet Smith" and "Mrs. Lane, do you know Miss Young?"

Worried about your table manners? Note-writing got you down? Our Reader Service booklet No. 45 covers these and many other phases of everyday etiquette. Send 25 cents (coin) for "New Book of Everyday Etiquette" to Weekly Newspaper Service, 243 W. 17th St., New York 11, N. Y. Print name, address, booklet title and No. 45.

Not So Fast
The freshman was getting back his first theme, and as he reached for it the professor stayed his hand.

"This," he announced, "is the best paper in the class."
The freshman's face beamed.
"Yes," the professor explained, "watermarked bond."

Strategy

Calling her husband into the kitchen, the worried housewife exclaimed in annoyance:

"Good gracious, Jack! How could you think of bringing that man Robinson home to supper when you know I'm spring cleaning?"

"Hash, m'dear!" said the hubby urgently. "He's the only man I know strong enough to help me move the dining room sideboard."

A Bit Ahead

Son—Mommy, isn't it 12 o'clock yet? Isn't it time for lunch?
Mother—No, son, it's too early.
Son—Gee, my tummy must be running fast.

Men have less courage than women—imagine a man with 10 cents in his pocket trying on 10 suits of clothes.

Chinese Use Numeratives, Tone Variations in Speech

In spoken Chinese, variations in tones are used to distinguish words of different meaning that would otherwise sound alike, says Collier's. As some of these variations are slight, misunderstanding is avoided by the use of a numerative, an auxiliary noun denoting the category of the object mentioned.

For example, the Chinese expression for "two books" is liang pen shu (two copies books). Thus, while the sound of shu also means tree and mustache, the listener knows, if he mistakes the tone, that the intended meaning is book because pen is the numerative for bound literature.

MILES NERVINE

BECAUSE he had a problem on his mind that morning Louie didn't give much attention to the man who got in his cab except to notice that he had an old, tired face and looked as though he might have money, and when he heard his passenger say, "Grand Central," he pulled out from the curb in a hurry and swung down a side street to Fourth avenue.

He hadn't had a decent fare that morning and his time would be up at noon. Grand Central, he knew, would meter about seventy-five cents, and if his fare was in the hurry he seemed to be and he got him there on time he might get a quarter extra, making it a dollar.

At Twelfth street, seeing some kind of a demonstration ahead of him, Louie tried to go down a side street to avoid being held up, but the street was filled with trucks and he had no choice but to fall in line behind the stalled up-town traffic. His mouth drew down at the corners and his hands tightened on the steering wheel as he read the signs and banners a group of demonstrators were carrying.

"Darn fools," he said. "Ain't we got troubles enough right here without people worryin' about what goes on in Spain and China and them other foreign countries?"

A faint smile played over his passenger's grim, sagging face. He had made a large donation to foreign relief himself, he remembered, about three months ago. He could make good use of that money, now.

"You don't believe," he asked, "in charity?"

"Not that kind!" Louie exhibited his strong, troubled profile. "Not when there's people in this country needing it just as much as they do over there."

THE MAN gazed admiringly at Louie's thick, lustrous hair, the healthy color of his neck and cheek.

"You," he said, "look strong and healthy."

"I'd be in a pickle," Louie told him, "if I wasn't."

"In what way?"

Louie shrugged. "You can't support a family on part time in the cab business." And then, his body seemed to grow rigid between his shoulders, "I'm a blood donor."

For a few moments the man was silent; his eyes were reflective. "That's interesting," he said finally. "I'm sure it's appreciated."

"You might think so," Louie gave a short laugh. "The last guy I gave my blood to threw me out of his apartment. He was practically dead. If I'd refused to make the transfusion he would have died. They wouldn't have had time to get anybody else. And yet because I couldn't pay him a month and a half's back rent I owed him he had me thrown out in the street—furniture, wife and kids—everything."

"That seems . . . unfair."

"Unfair!" Louie's hand tightened over the steering wheel. "How would you feel if the guy that cracked down on you was walking around the streets with your blood in him? And this guy's rich! He didn't need the money. He'd given five thousand bucks to the Red Cross a couple of months before. He's got more real estate in New York than he knows what to do with."

Louie put his cab in gear. The parade had moved on. Traffic was beginning to thin out ahead. "I'm just praying that some day I'll meet that guy. There's some things I'd like to tell him."

"You'd recognize him—this man, if you saw him?"

"Only by his picture in the newspapers. They had him all covered up when I gave him the transfusion. Only his arm was sticking out."

Louie crossed Fourteenth street and swung into the outside lane to make up for the lost time. "But I'll meet him some day," he said.

For some time the man behind him gazed directly through the windshield. He seemed to be unaware of the fact that his face was in full view of the rear-vision mirror. He looked very old, and very tired.

"I see what you mean," he said finally, and Louie could just barely hear him above the noise of traffic. "I suppose we do pay too much attention to what's going on in other countries and overlook sometimes what's going on right under our noses. But we mean all right. It's easier for us to give to an organization that's rigged up to help groups of people than it is to look around yourself for people who need help."

"IF YOU were to meet the man you gave your blood to and didn't know him you might think him a pretty decent kind of a fellow. A man isn't generally thoughtless or bad just because he's rich. Suppose he was caught in a jam himself and needed every dollar he could lay his hands on. Suppose a group of banks were going to foreclose on him and he'd lose everything he had in the world if they did? A fellow like you—young and healthy, why, you could afford to lose a million dollars. You could make it back again if you wanted to; and if you didn't want to you could do something else."

"But when a man gets along in life and then loses everything he's been working for for forty or fifty years it's apt to be quite as big a shock to him as it was to you to be turned out of your apartment. In fact, some very good men aren't able to survive such shocks."

"For all you know, that man may be dead. You may never see or even hear of him again."

With a strange feeling in his throat, Louie turned his cab into Forty-second street and drew up before Grand Central station. The guy seemed to know what he was talking about, he thought. And suppose this man had died—after he'd given him his blood. Died with his blood in his veins. He'd never thought of that before. And he didn't like it, somehow.

"I guess you're right," he said, his head lowered as he tore the slip from his meter and handed it back. "After all, he didn't know me from Adam. I guess we all make mistakes."

A strange smile lighted the man's face. His hand trembled as he drew from his wallet his last hundred dollar bill and pressed it, folded, into Louie's hand.

"It's never too late," he said, "to try to rectify those mistakes."

Ten Rules for Happiness

You've read, you've thought, you've heard a good deal about happiness. You've seen people seek it, most of them unsuccessfully. You wonder whether there is really any way to guarantee yourself as much happiness as you think everyone has a right to expect.

Maybe these ten rules from the Cleveland Academy of Medicine will help. A learned committee from this academy studied the matter. What it sought was a formula for happier living.

The rules are:

Have a hobby. A hobby is a refuge, a storm cellar into which you can duck when stress and storms on the surface of your life buffet you about too much.

Develop a philosophy of life. That simply means to have a guide by which to live. A life without one is a helter-skelter existence without plan, without goal, without the comfort of ideals or truth.

Share your thoughts. Companionship is essential to personality and to mental health. If anyone lives too long with his own thoughts they can generate explosive qualities that destroy. Confess, confide, consult someone you like.

Face your fears and have it out. The world is filled with people running away from fears, but never quite escaping them. Face yours. Overcome them boldly.

Balance fantasy in your life with fact. Dream, for all normal beings must, but balance your dreams with acts. Don't fall into the habit of dreaming your life away.

Beware of alluring escapes from your troubles but face them realistically and work out a reasonable answer.

Exercise moderately in order that you may have physical as well as mental health.

Love wisely, for life without love is life without light.

Don't worry.

Trust in time and be patient.

There you have the ten rules for happiness. They seem almost too simple to be effective.

But they are the rules based upon eternal truths of human nature and psychology, and if you will adopt and follow them they will do some interesting things to your own life.

BEING LOYAL TO TRUE RELIGION

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 18:20, 21, 30-39.
MEMORY SELECTION—Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again.—I Kings 18: 37.

God meets the challenge of unbelief and sin through the ages in its different forms. In the days of Elijah it was the awful power of the false religion of Baal which threw its pall of heathenish immorality over the people.

The prophet was God's man of courage in a day of unbelief and sin. To be courageous means to steadily meet perils of which one is deeply conscious, doing so because of the call of duty. Courage holds a deeper and nobler meaning than bravery, carrying with it the idea of moral strength and, in the case of the Christian, faith in God as one devoted to his cause.

The account of the conflict with the prophets of Baal on Mount Carmel is a dramatic and instructive story. It shows that when God's man meets God's enemy there is an open, above-board, honest victory.

I. Nothing Hidden (vv. 20-21, 30).

The appeal to Israel cut no corners and made no compromises. They must choose between the true God and the false Baal. They could not hold to both or halt between two opinions. The same is true today of our relationship to Jesus Christ.

The direct challenge at Mount Carmel follows the same pattern of out-in-the-open dealing with the problem.

Men whose deeds are evil love darkness rather than light. God does not have to work in the dark. All of his workings are in the open sunlight. Everyone is welcome to "come near" and see what is done.

Elijah knew God and he acted like God's man. What a tragedy it is that not all of God's servants have followed his example. If we had the open and above-board dealings of Elijah in the affairs of our churches, we might see more of the fire and power of his ministry.

Certain it is that the administration of church affairs which has to be carried out in hidden corners by whispered conversations and by secret manipulations behind the scenes is not God's work at all, it is the work of man.

II. No Favors Asked (vv. 33-35).

Elijah rebuilt the altar himself. He asked no help of the unbelieving prophets of Baal or of apostate Israel. How old-fashioned he seems in this day when so much stress is laid on a false unity of the faiths, and there is so much solicitation and acceptance by the church of the help of unbelievers in financing the supposed work of God.

Note also that Elijah invited his enemies to make the answer to his prayer more difficult by pouring water on the sacrifice. This was not an act of bravado; it was for the purpose of demonstrating that there was no fraud. He was willing that the enemies of the truth should make the demonstration more difficult if that would be to God's glory.

There is a delightful old-fashioned flavor about that act, too, in these days when men are frequently willing to compromise with unbelief and even with sin, in order that the work of the church may be carried on without too much difficulty. Here again we have an explanation of the lack of spiritual power in our times.

The victory which came was a glorious testimony to the living reality and the infinite power of God. It left

III. No Glory to Man (vv. 30b-32, 36-39).

A man of bravery usually wants recognition for himself, while the courageous man asks only that the cause for which he fights shall be successful.

Elijah had long since demonstrated that he was absolutely fearless, and sought no favor or glory (read the entire story). Now in the tenseness of this moment, he carefully rebuilds the altar of the true God (v. 30), makes it a testimony of unity to a divided Israel (v. 31), and he does it all in the name of the Lord (v. 32).

His prayer (vv. 36, 37) is a profoundly simple expression of a complete faith in the true God and his power, on the part of a man who recognized himself as being only the divine servant. He made no plea that God would vindicate him or his ministry, but he did plead that the name of the Lord should be honored in the midst of an unbelieving people.

"The fire of the Lord fell." The lying prophets of heathendom were routed. Many recognized Jehovah as the true God. While Israel did not long remember the lesson learned here, the story has continued as a testimony that will strengthen the people of God as long as time continues.

Oil Sewing Machine

When not in use, keep the sewing machine covered to protect it from dust. Letting the presser foot down on a scrap of cloth helps the tension to stay at proper adjustment and also takes up any excess oil that may run down the needle bar. If the machine is left idle for a considerable time, occasional oiling keeps the oil in the machine from drying and becoming gummy.

Cooking Fruit

For cooked dishes, apples and pears need a little extra sweetening. Corn sirup, honey or molasses may be substituted for sugar, measure for measure. Or try one of these sugar-saving tricks: When baking pears or apples, stuff the centers with dates or raisins. This adds sweetness, and only about 1 teaspoon sugar will be needed for each piece of fruit.

Onions Nutritious

While their flavor appeal is the onion's biggest bid for popularity, they have a rightful claim to a place in the diet because they contain small amounts of vitamin C and B complex as well as mineral elements, calcium, and iron. Like other vegetables, onions provide needed bulk in the diet.

WHY AUTO PREMIUMS ARE MORE

Here's why an increase in automobile insurance rates is necessary.

1. Bodily injury claim costs have risen as a result of a 30% increase in automobile accident deaths, rural accidents showing a 48% increase. Bodily injury claims are averaging 40% more than in 1941 because of loss of high wages and accelerated medical and hospitalization costs.

2. Property damages and collision claims are likewise mounting. Repair costs are up at least 35%, closely following the upward trend in general living costs. Wages of mechanics are high and repair parts are still scarce and costly.

3. Although 15 million of the 27 million cars on the road should be replaced with new autos, the 1946 output of new cars totals only about

2,200,000 with 5,000,000 expected in 1947. However, new cars are costing from 30 to 50% more than in 1941 so that many older cars will continue on the road, creating a serious hazard.

4. As evidence that old cars are not standing up, the American Automobile Association reports 17% more breakdowns.

5. The 18.7% increase in automobile thefts in 1945 was followed by a 15.5% additional increase in 1946.

6. With highways and streets in poor condition and with drivers operating older cars at faster speeds there is no immediate relief in sight, although insurance safety organizations are doing their utmost to check the rising accident trend.

Drive Carefully, Carry Insurance, Better be safe than sorry. Be careful where ever you see children and old people. Drive Slowly.

MAKE WATER POTABLE BY CHEMICAL MEANS

Most of us take good drinking water for granted. Yet in many sections of our land the only available water supply is so brackish, so full of mineral salts, that it cannot be used for drinking.

Drinking water is supplied to some of these districts by tank-truck; others distill their water—expensive process. But now a manufacturer has perfected a new method by which brackish water can be transformed into fresh, potable water easily and inexpensively, by means of chemicals.

The method demineralizes any quantity of water up to 1,000,000 gallons a day, and from almost any inland source.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Where's the Argument?

You should have heard Ed Carey and Spike Miller debating the merits of Guernseys versus Holsteins. Ed's our firechief, and Spike handles hardware—but to hear them argue you'd have thought that they'd been dairying for life.

Finally they put it up to Sam Carter, who breeds dairy cows! Sam hems and haws... and concludes there's a lot to be said for Holsteins, and about as much for Guernseys... take your pick!

Actually, Ed and Spike were like people arguing about—say, beer versus buttermilk. Folks who've never tasted beer will sometimes get mighty vehement about their choice of beverages. And folks who've never tasted buttermilk will be equally pig-headed.

From where I sit, it's in things we know nothing about that we get bigoted and stubborn. But when it comes to things we know a lot about, we're able to see both sides... be tolerant and reasonable... and above all, understanding.

DWARFING A GIANT . . . Despite its 308-foot drop (almost double that of Niagara) the Lower Falls in Yellowstone National park appear small in comparison with the surroundings in Yellowstone canyon.

'SEE AMERICA FIRST'

National Parks Are Major Lure to Vacation Throngs

WNU Features.

Vacation-hungry Americans are on the move. Tourist trails once again are jammed as the American public, with its vacation lanes unshackled of wartime restrictions, attempts to cram a full quota of fun and frolic, rest and relaxation, adventure and sight-seeing into the short vacation span of a few weeks.

The upsurge in vacation travel is noted in all forms of land, sea and air transportation. Trains and buses are crowded; airlines are booked with reservations; passenger vessels and even tramp steamers are unable to accommodate all those bent on sea-faring jaunts.

With transportation, food and hotel accommodations in Europe still insecure in the war's aftermath, most Americans still are content, as they were last year, to heed the old slogan of "See America First."

The nation's principal attraction for vacationists is the national park system, embracing 169 separate areas in all parts of the United States. Last year the park system attracted a record-shattering 21,600,000 visitors, half a million more than in any previous year.

On the basis of attendance so far, Newton B. Drury, director of the National Park service, which administers the system, predicts that 1947 will set another new record.

"What's more," says the park chief, "we hope to be able to take better care of our visitors than we did last year, when our park staffs had nowhere near recovered from the reductions of wartime."

Concessioners who operate the hotels, lodges, stores and transportation system in the parks also were short-handed last year, Drury points out, but he adds that "they probably will be in better shape this year."

AS HAS BEEN the case for many years, one of the most popular travel objectives of the American vacationer will be Yellowstone National park in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho. Yellowstone is the oldest park in the entire system; it is, in fact, the oldest national park in the world, having celebrated the 75th anniversary of its founding on March 1 of this year.

Containing approximately 2,213,000 acres, it is noted for its geysers and hot springs, of which it has more than any other area in the world. Old Faithful, spouting its steaming waters high into the air at intervals of about an hour, day and night, summer and winter, has become a virtual symbol of Yellowstone.

Yet Yellowstone would be a great national park if there weren't a geyser or hot spring. While the two great falls of the Yellowstone and the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone with its vividly colored walls combine to form its most spectacular scenic feature, the park abounds in natural beauty. Yellowstone lake, with its hundred miles of shoreline and its eastern border of lofty peaks; scores of towering waterfalls; Obsidian cliff, of black glass; high and sweeping upland valleys and vast expanses of little-known wilderness—these merely suggest the variety of the scenery is possesses.

No other national park is as widely known for its wildlife. Yellowstone played an important part in restoration of the American bison, after it had come close to extinction, and there are hundreds of them in the park today. In quiet streams and marshes, the traveler is likely at any time to come across moose, Elk, antelope, bighorn sheep, grizzly

STUDY IN CONTRASTS . . . Big Bend National park offers a combination of rugged mountainous terrain and semi-desert vegetation, as indicated by this view through the "window" in Chisos mountains.

Hyde Park Visitors Cause Damage

WASHINGTON. — Half a million visitors have worn such a path through Franklin D. Roosevelt's Hyde Park, N. Y., home, now a national historic site, that a bit of bracing and carpeting has become necessary, the National Park service reports.

Furthermore, according to the park service, there has been "some wear and tear" on the grounds and lawns have been ruined.

Prevent Cannibalism By Good Management

Keeping Chicks Active Is Real Secret of Success

By W. J. DRYDEN

Chicks will seldom be cannibalistic if provided with proper brooder and range space, correct temperature and air control and a balanced ration, properly fed. They must be kept alert and active. Only the mistreated, sluggish chick will turn to cannibalism.

While the chicks must be comfortable, the temperature should be reduced gradually.

Use a good starting mash. There is no substitute for the best for starting baby chicks. Give them all they will eat at all times and provide plenty of eating troughs. When the chicks are four to five weeks old they may be given grain, and made to scratch for it.

Baby chicks must be managed right to prevent cannibalism.

A good range and shelter should be provided. Pasture such as bluegrass, alfalfa or lespedeza will lower the feed cost and make the chickens take on economical gain. Swiss chard, kale, Chinese cabbage or rape may be planted and the leaves pulled and fed to the chicks. Alfalfa, clover or other grasses may be chopped and fed fresh, or alfalfa leaf meal utilized to aid in proper health and growth.

BUILD FERTILITY

Careless handling of manure causes serious losses of fertilizer and organic matter needed to help increase crop yields and rebuild soil structure.

One hundred tons of manure contains 25 tons of organic matter, 1,000 pounds of nitrogen, 200 pounds of phosphorus and 800 pounds of potash, one-half of it in the liquid part. Piled outside and exposed to rain and weather for several months, this 100 tons may shrink to 50 tons and lose half its fertility and organic matter. Losses may be reduced by using enough bedding to soak up all liquid manure, cleaning stalls frequently and hauling manure directly to fields, or storing carefully.

Baby Rides Tractor

Those who have youngsters who like to ride the tractor will be interested in this improvised baby seat designed by A. J. Matyus for the Lincoln foundation contest.

The seat consists of two auto leaf springs, pieces of one-inch round iron 24 inches long for stationary steering column and an obsolete steering wheel. The main leaves were bent in the forge and holes were punched to conform to the cultivator fittings and to give shock absorbing effect. The footrest was welded to the spring leaves. All work was done with 1/4 inch mild steel electrodes.

Thick Stand Helps in Boosting Corn Yield

Farmers who would boost their yields of corn should plant thicker stands than they ordinarily do, advises University of Kentucky. Improved soil and the use of hybrid corn seed makes it possible for most farmers to have thicker stands. About 10,000 stalks can be grown on better-than-average land, and 12,000 to 14,000 stalks on very fertile land with good moisture-holding capacity.

AS THE lid of a new baseball season is pried off, it seems to be about time that Ford Frick, president of the National league, and Will Harridge, president of the American league, did something about the umpire situation.

We are referring to the matter of umpire baiting—including profanity, invective and shouted insults from too many managers, and too many players, who use umpires as alibis for their own mistakes or dumbness. We agree 100 per cent with Wilbur Wood, sportswriter, that such actions in the future should be suppressed under drastic penalties.

It has been said that umpire baiting has a big crowd appeal and that it is now an accepted addition to the national game. We don't believe this is true. It may have its appeal to a few, inclined to the mucker side, but not to the mass of spectators, who go out to get their thrills from a hard fought battle on the field, not to hear a salvo of billingsgate directed at some man in blue. If this has become a tradition, then it is a tradition that should be ended.

Fight and aggressiveness are a big part of the game, but they should be directed against the opposing team, not against an able arbirer, whose average of ability is too often well above the average of the ball player's skill.

Umpires today are carefully selected and well trained. Their record for honesty in the last 40 years surpasses any other record in sport.

Proud of Profession

They have an amazing pride in their work, in calling each play as they see it. Pride in their profession is something that not all managers and ball players have. Many have—but too many do not. Otherwise, many more ball players would be in far better physical shape both before and during the baseball season.

The managerial or player squawk is usually an alibi, either for lack of physical skill or a cover-up for missing brain cylinders. No smart fan ever falls for this corny humbug, this attempt to shift the blame.

The umpire's decision is final. A dozen profane Babels can't change it. Right or wrong, it is the way he saw it. And the umpire is in the spot to see it better than anyone else. He is certainly in a far better spot than howling fans, 150 to 200 feet from the play, looking on at deceptive angles.

A short while back, we asked several National league umpires what managers and what teams gave them the least amount of trouble.

The vote came for Billy Southworth, formerly of the Cardinals now directing the Braves, and Eddie Dyer of the Cardinals.

Cardinals Don't Argue

Neither Southworth nor Dyer will stand for any such rowdy tactics. And what team has been the most aggressive outfit in baseball for the last 10 years? You know the answer. The Cardinals. But they take out their aggressiveness in hustle and scrappiness on the field. Their opponents are the other teams—not the umpires.

No umpire ever heard Walter Johnson make any sort of kick.

"In a sudden lapse, I called a pitch that almost split the plate a ball against Walter Johnson," Billy Evans told me. "Johnson never even frowned. I apologized later for my mistake. 'Yes, I knew it was a strike,' Johnson said, 'but we all make mistakes.'"

I was sitting on the bench with Ted Williams. He went to bat with two on and took a third strike. No squawk.

"Was that a good one?" I asked him.

"Yes," Ted said. "It cut the outside corner by an inch. It fooled me. It was a swell pitch."

That's the way baseball should be. The great majority of the big names in the game are that way. They don't have to throw their alibis at the umpire. Cy Young, Mathewson, Alexander, Johnson—four of the greatest of all pitchers, never had any umpire trouble.

If ball players want to show their aggressiveness, why not score from first on a single to center to win a world series, as Country Slaughter did? Or run bases as the Cardinals run bases?

Rare in Other Games

What fun can a crowd get from seeing a swarm of players surround some umpire, holding up the game, howling about a decision that won't and can't be changed? They don't see anything like this happen in football, an even more rugged competitive sport. They rarely see it in any other game.

Umpire baiting isn't aggressiveness. Too often it is cowardice, and this also goes for the stands, where the odds are only 30,000 to 1.

The umpire can take care of himself. Being human, he will make his share of mistakes on split-second or split-inch decisions.

In April, 1884, Thomas Stevens left San Francisco to ride around the world on a high-wheeled bicycle, a feat considered impossible at the time as few persons had yet learned to handle this tricky contrivance, even on a paved street, says Collier's.

While Stevens traveled by boat across the Atlantic, Pacific, etc., he pedaled his way over 13,500 land miles, through the United States and 11 other countries from England to Japan, and arrived back in San Francisco in December, 1886.
